

Zorbcaps Orxplorer – Matrimony (Unreleased)

Last Update: 04/01/2021

Matrimony Orxplorer
33	/40	Casting Quality
17	/25	Complexity
12	/15	Texturing
9	/10	Stem Fit/Butts
_____	/10	Other
_____	/100	Total

Notes

Casting Quality

Much like with all of Zorb's work, the casting quality is quite high on this cap. Of all of the more positive points to note on this cap, though, the fact that there is virtually no color bleeding or thinness for a white base is truly a great example of craftsmanship. There is a slight hit here though due to a bubble on the lower left hand side of the eye.

Complexity

While by no means a complex design relative to other Zorbcaps, the simplicity and placement of features is extremely well executed with a nice balance in details and fairly crisp line work. As well, the different material and texture eyes is a nice touch as well.

Texturing

While it may appear a bit rough in texture, in all reality this cap is extremely smoothly casted and has a consistent touch across all sides and features.

Stem Fit/Butt

Again, seemingly following with a "less is more" style of design, the butt is fairly blank and detail-less with this Orxplorer. As well, the stem fitting on this cap is incredibly well done in terms of alignment and fits well onto and off of switches without the need of a hot water bath at all.

Other

Zorb's choice to do Orxplorer sales in the form of a 'choose your own adventure' type setup here can absolutely not be passed over as it helps lend a historical touch to each of his keycaps. In light of this style of sales, I leave it to the reader to fill in their own score for the 'Other' section with whatever crayon color they so choose.